Hallett Kilbourn's Suit.

The case of Halbett Kilbourn's Suit.

The case of Halbett Kilbourn's the Speaker and Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives will, it is expected, be disposed of during the present term of the United States Supreme court. The decision, it is claimed, will settle the question of the legal anthority of one branch of Congress to arrest and imprison a private children to charged with violating any law of the land. Mr. Kilbourn, it will be remembered, was a "recusant" witness pistol at him, threatening to shoot if he did not leave the house. On April 20, 1878, Mrs. Casey put in her suswer, denying the allegations, and roaking counter charges against her instituted. In the court below the bill was dismissed, and from this decree the plaintiff appealed. His Homer sold that the patition was on the ground of crucity to the husband. If the testiment was to be gradied, the ground was ample, as fac as the decellection of the wife was concerned. The groof showed the existence of a perpetual and protracted general will be remembered, was a "recusant" witness during the Glover investigation, having re-fused to exhibit books and papers of his firm to the committee. He was declared "in conto the committee. He was declared in con-tempt" and confined in the District jail for some six weeks, until released by Chief-Justice Carter upon a writ of habers corpus. Mr. Kilbourn brought suit for $150,000 for false imprisonment, and the case is now before the bratchiry, the worst known in civilization and observed in daily conversation, a condition of things that node it incompatible that they should be compelled to live together any longer—incompatible with paces and lnoun-patible with the respectability of the neighborhood. Such actions are daily conducted as a nulance two community and an outrage upon public decency, especially to those persons compelled to reside where it happens. White the wife had given cause for divorcy, still the court thought that the husband was reme court. As the Constitution presupreme that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, the plaintiff will endeavor to have the question actiled whether a private effice has any rights, under this provision, which a Congressional committee is bound to respect.

Joseffy.

Joseffy.

This latest compeer of Rubenstein Von Bulow. Thalberg and Gottschalk, whom the Vienna papers have declared a second Liszt, will give his only concert in Washington at Limodh Hall to-morrow night, and scats can now be secured at Metzerott & Co.'s store. The New York Tribing, in an elaborate orit cism of J. seffy scencert, says: Compeled with elegance of execution is a wonderful—we are tempted to say unparalleled—beauty of touch. By touch, we mean the sensions quality of the tone evoked from the instrument through some indefinable art in striking the keyr—sit art wholly distinct from that of execution, which has to do with combinations and successions of notes rather than with the timbre of each. If Joseffy's style was a surprise his tone was a revelation. Few of us believed that they have could produce sounds so sweet and so valued. Whonever he pressed the key board he dropped Jeweis from his fingers." Maggie Mitchell.

Maggie Mitchell.

To the theatre-loving public of Washington the visit of Maggie Mitchell at the National Theatre this week will be like the arrival of a valued friend who, with each returning senson, comes to delight as with stories of human loys and woes. There is this peculiarity in Maggie Mitchell's creations that there is a total absence of anything strained or artificial. They appeal to our deepest sympathies, yet, at the same time, sparkle with fresh, innocent manor. It would appear like a work of supercrogation to enumerate the many excellencies of Maggie Mitchell's impersonations. It suffices to say that, like good wine, she improves with age, she is supported by Mr. William II. Harris, an actor of considerable merit, and by a carcuity selected company. To night she will appear in her greatest success, Marse, in the "Pearl of Savoy;" after that in "Fanchon," "Jane Eyre," "Little Barefoot," "Lorle' and other equally popular plays.

Ford's Comic Opera.

The lovers of comic opera will have an opportunity this week to have their (aste graffled to the fullest bent of their inclination. Wherever it has appeared Ford's Comic Opera Company has gathered the heartlest encombines of both press and public, and crowded houses have nightly attented enjoyable performances. A feature of the company is the magnificent church choir chorns, and as opera companies, as a rule, are lamentally deficient in the matter of chorns, it is quite a relief to anticipate an improvement in this most important accessory of an opera. A mong the strists composing the troupe are Marie Bokel, Blanche Ford, lielle McKenzle, George Denham, Charles Hogendorf and others equally proficient. The initial performance will be the ever popular "Pluafore," to be followed by "The Little Puke," "The Sorcerer." "The Mayor, "Chiracs of Normandy," "Patinitza" and other like meritorious works.
